editor's note

By MARVIN SOSNA

You may have heard of the Topanga-Las Virgenes Resource Conservation District, but I'll be surprised if you know what it does.

Or, more exactly, what it did last summer.

Had more people known what it was doing, chances are they would have been ready for the Dayton Canyon fire that swept through their area last weekend.

I thank Lesley Devine, one of five directors of the district, for sending me a copy of the district's quarterly newsletter. On Page I of the summer issue it says, "It's That Time Again - Fire Season."

The article goes on to advise homeowners that the district can help them learn about chaparral; watershed and fire management; improving home safety through design, landscaping and maintenance; protecting people and property during a wild-fire; and emergency treatment of hillsides after the fire has passed.

It's all in a 32-page booklet titled, "A Homeowner's Guide to Fire and Watershed Management." And it's been available free since summer at the district offices, 122 N. Topanga Canyon Blvd., Topanga.

For most of us, it's not too late to get a copy. For some, it is too late, unfortunately.

politics have sprung a leak

As per the letter I say ...
